

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE:

Roland Paris is Professor of International Affairs in the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs at the University of Ottawa, founding director of the Centre for International Policy Studies (CIPS), and former foreign and defence policy advisor to the Prime Minister of Canada. He is also an Associate Fellow of the Royal Institute of International Affairs (Chatham House). His research on international security, civil conflicts, peacebuilding, and Canadian and American foreign policy has appeared in leading academic outlets and earned several prizes, including the Grawemeyer Award for Ideas Improving World Order. He has also won six awards for teaching and public service. Previously, he was Visiting Fellow at the Institut d'études politiques (Sciences Po) in Paris, Assistant Professor at the University of Colorado at Boulder, Visiting Researcher at the Visiting Researcher at the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, DC, and Director of Research at the Conference Board of Canada, the country's largest think tank. He has also held several advisory positions in government, including in the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Privy Council (Cabinet) Office. In addition, he was appointed to a ten-member group of international experts advising the Secretary General of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Professor Paris is an editorial board member of seven scholarly journals. He has served on the board of directors of several organizations, including the World University Service of Canada and the Academic Council on the United Nations System, and he provides regular analysis and commentary on international affairs for national and international media. He holds a Ph.D. from Yale University, an M.Phil. from the University of Cambridge, and a B.A. from the University of Toronto.